Public and parochial school children are invited to participate in the parade.

MARTIN HOLDS SLIM LEAD AT OREGON POLLS

Agricultural Element
Challenges Labor
Strength

HESS TRAILING BY 446 BALLOTS

Salem Editor Pulls Away
From Seven Rivals In
G. O. P. Race

(By Associated Press)
PORTLAND, Ore., May 21.—Gov. Charles H. Martin, retired major general who warred against "labor terrorism" and an opponent favored by two New Dealers, forged ahead by nearly 1,000 votes in today's tabulation of a bitter Democratic primary contest.

Seeking renomination, the 74-year-old Martin had 32,198 votes to 31,215 for Henry L. Hess, who was supported by Secretary Ickes and Senator George W. Norris. This tabulation was from 981 precincts out of the state's 1,681. O. Henry Oleen was third in the gubernatorial race with 4,743.

PORTLAND, Ore., May 21.—The traditionally conservative agricultural element challenged the strength of Oregon labor today and gave Gov. Charles H. Martin a slim, uncertain lead over the favorite of two New Dealers in the nationally significant Democratic primary contest for governor.

The 74-year-old governor, who described himself as loyal to President Roosevelt without offering "rubber stamp" endorsement to the administration's program, led Henry L. Hess of La Grande, former state senator, by 446 votes in the unofficial count from 1,112 of the state's 1,681 precincts. Martin's total was 30,855 against 30,409 for Hess.

Awaits 210 Precincts
Hess, described by Martin as a John L. Lewis CIO candidate, looked to reports from 210 missing precincts in labor's chief stronghold to draw him back toward the 2,000-vote leadership he once held.

Martin hoped for additional strength in 179 missing precincts in the well-populated farming country.

Hess, supported by Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska independent, and, in effect, by Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes, who censured Martin as not a "New Dealer" at heart, drew his votes primarily from the lumbering counties.

The governor, who used the language of his army training as a major-general had threatened to "kick the pants" off the National Labor Relations Board and assailed Secretary of Labor Perkins as "that miserable secretary."

BROOKS FREED IN KLINE CASE

Not Guilty Verdict Returned By Stark
County Jury

Roy Brooks, 26, of Sebring, was free today after a Stark county common pleas jury at Canton found him not guilty of second degree manslaughter in the death of Merle Needham Kline, 20, of Salem, on April 9.

The Salem youth was fatally injured when struck by Brooks' car on the Alliance-Canton highway where Kline had stopped his automobile to change a tire.

As part of the state's case in rebuttal, the hydraulic breaking apparatus of Brooks' car was brought into the courtroom and reassembled to determine whether the immediate cause of the accident was a defect in the brake line.

Brooks testified that when he saw the parked car at a distance of between 75 and 100 feet and while traveling between 35 and 40 miles an hour, he applied his brakes. He said he felt the brakes take hold at once, and then he noticed that there was no appreciable change in the forward movement of his car. As a result, he said his car crashed into the rear of the parked car.

RESERVE CLASS IS CALLED OUT; 2 NAZIS SLAIN

Shot by Border Guards
Attempting To Pass
Into Germany

TENSION MOUNTS THROUGH NATION

Vote Outcome May Determine Fate of Sudeten Germans

(By Associated Press)
PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, May 21. Germany's little neighbor, Czechoslovakia, today called out a reserve class to bolster her 190,000-man army on the eve of tense municipal elections testing political strength of the 3,500,000 Nazi-supported German minority.

Two Germans were killed by Czech border guards as they attempted to cross into Germany. Scattered disorders preceded the crucial vote.

Tension Mounts
The reserve call, for part of Czechoslovakia's 1,500,000 trained second line soldiers, came as tension mounted throughout the nation half-surrounded by German military might and in Europe's watchful capitals.

Reports to adjoining Hungary said sand-bag barricades had been erected at Czechoslovakia's military gateway — the Pilsen-Eger road and machine guns set up by troops taking control of strategic points.

Outcome of the Sunday elections might determine the fate of Europe's most pressing problem — the demands of the Sudeten minority, with Adolf Hitler's spoken support, for self-government.

Czech authorities said the two Germans, shot to death last night near Eger by Czech border guards, were killed when trying to cross into Germany illegally.

The government called up a class of army reserves but declared this in no way constituted mobilization on the eve of the elections.

The government also declared the reserve call did not indicate plans for moving new troops to the border.

Just to Keep Order
Official circles emphasized the measure was taken solely in order to bring troops up to full strength with the object of keeping order in view of recent disturbances.

The reserve call came as President Eduard Benes told Czechoslovakia's — encircling — authoritarian neighbors that the small world was created nation was unafraid in facing the present critical situation.

Czech sources said the two Germans, followers of the militant Czech Nazi leader, Konrad Henlein, were shot as they passed a police barracks on a motorcycle after repeated warnings to halt.

President Benes' statement was made in a radio broadcast to the nation.

FOR PASTING PURPOSES

It's everybody's privilege to guess what the Pennsylvania primary means to the future of the nation and the world.

Possibly as good a guess as any is this: The CIO got its fingers burned when it reached for control of the Democratic party in Pennsylvania. That's really not a guess, but a fact; the voting totals show what happened.

More in the line of guessing is this: That it was a bad year in Pennsylvania for all irregulars. First, there were the CIO candidates who got licked. Then there was former Gov. Gifford Pinchot, famous Republican irregular. He got licked, too.

As the various factions lay down their war clubs to kiss and make up, the upshot of their quibbling seems to be something like this: The lefties lost. If Pennsylvania be typical, this may be water on the wheel of those who are willing to bet their shirts that the era of political corn plasters and snake medicine is over in the United States for the time being. Paste this in your hat. If it looks good next November, it's prophecy. If it doesn't, it's just something you pasted in your hat last May.

STRONG MAN TROUBLE

The common symptom of acute political congestion—strong man trouble—has appeared in Mexico. President Cardenas finally has had to face realities and knock out the props from under Gen. Cedillo, who is reported to have ideas of his own about the federal government. The general is believed to have formed an effective army of his own with the peasants of the state of San Luis Potosi in central Mexico.

What to do with strong men who get troublesome is a political problem for which no one has an answer. They can be killed, which is the expedient way. But it has its disadvantages. Martyrdom is one of them. They can be sent to a relatively safe place, but in that case it's never certain they will stay put. Or they can be exiled, which requires a great deal of finesse.

Abraham Lincoln had perhaps the smoothest method. He put them into his own cabinet and appealed to their better nature. Under different circumstances—and assuming Gen. Cedillo possesses a better nature—President Cardenas might order him to come to Mexico City and help run the government. As it is, the general seems to be at large, an uneasy situation for all concerned.

For Sunday, May 22

Sunday's horoscope is a very fortunate one, especially for affairs of the church and state, the clergy and all philanthropic enterprises. There is much to be gained in popularity with persons of importance and authority, although there may be some slight setbacks or disappointments. Investments and finances, as well as social relations and friendships, should thrive and bring much happiness.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a prosperous and happy year, with many affairs developing fortunately despite certain setbacks or disappointments. Investments, finances and advantageous connections with those in place and power are assured, with much personal and social satisfaction.

A child born on this day may be efficient, ambitious, generous and kindly, having a fine personality and proud bearing.

For Monday, May 23

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather intriguing one, with the probable precipitation of sudden and quite unforeseen matters that have peculiar or mysterious angles. It may be necessary to deal quietly or with stratagem or secrecy in order to put over these unexpected programs, but in the end such methods will give stability and worth to the prospects.

Those whose birthday it is may experience a year of peculiar, mystifying or intriguing adventures, with sudden and surprising matters claiming the attention. These may have to be handled with ingenuity, cleverness and probably craft or secrecy. Changes or travel are possible, but in all be discreet, practical and vigilant.

A child born on this day may be quite temperamental, excitable, emotional and fond of change and unusual adventures. The intriguing, mysterious and novel may lure it from commonplace endeavors.

TODAY'S GRADUATES BETTER EQUIPPED FOR JOBS

(By United Press)

NEW HAVEN, Conn., May 21.—When colleges throughout the country pour thousands of graduates into the business world next month, most of them will be equipped to adjust themselves readily to prevailing economic conditions.

That is the belief of Albert Beecher Crawford, whose job as head of Yale's Personnel Study and Bureau of Appointments, is to help students "find themselves" while at college and place graduates in lines of business to which they are best suited.

Before the depression, Crawford said, "students adopted a somewhat free attitude about their living following graduation for they knew that jobs were available."

Students More Critical

However, when the slump came and the number of jobless ran into the millions, Crawford found that undergraduates "assumed a more critical point of view toward themselves and toward the things that they were fitted for. In all, they seemed to think a lot more seriously about equipping themselves to meet present situations than a few years ago. Publicity given to the death of jobs for equipped men caused them to take more time to analyze themselves and the business world."

What have colleges done to fortify students against hard times?

Crawford, as a general illustration, explained Yale's experiences.

"There is a direct effort on the part of the college to find jobs for graduating students and to encourage students to analyze themselves to learn just what they would be best fitted to apply for. A placement service has grown considerably during the past few years and has borne considerable fruit. This year the outlook for placement work is not as bright as it was in 1937, which was a boom year with more placements than any other time recorded.

East and Midwest Lead

"However, there are more jobs available now than in the years from 1933 to 1936. Calls for men come from all parts of the country, but mostly from the east and middle west. The majority are in manufacturing or productive lines.

"Financial calls are quite scarce, only a few of the larger eastern banking houses seem to be looking for men. And Wall Street, once the haven for hundreds of college men, is about dead.

"However, if things pick up within the next few months we will most likely receive many more requests for graduates from all fields."

And, as an encouraging note, he added, "at present a good many firms notify us that they are in need of new help but are waiting for an upswing in business conditions before adding to their staffs."

The problem of adjusting students to particular pursuits to which they are best fitted, Crawford found, was easily overcome. During the summer vacation periods they were given "tryout" jobs. Usually, before graduation, the student had a definite idea of his aptitude and registered with the placement bureau which contacted business firms and industries to solicit situations.

More Technical Jobs

Crawford's assistant, Prof. Stuart

H. Clement, explained that "more jobs are being offered to technically trained than to non-technical men. This has been true for the past few years. At present 365 of the seniors are enrolled as applicants in the personnel bureau, for jobs when they graduate. This represents about half of the senior classes of Yale's three schools."

Colleges which offer vocational courses, Crawford and Clement agreed, probably would obtain better results in obtaining employment for their graduates in view of the increasing demand for technical men.

Yale, they said, "is distinctly a cultural center and except for the Sheffield Scientific school there are no vocational courses given which might equip graduates for special jobs."

HEALTH

TRANSFUSIONS

A POPULAR magazine recently devoted several pages to a story of the advancements made in what we call blood transfusion. Pictures were presented to show the various stages of the procedure. In consequence of this article, I have received many inquiries about transfusions.

There is really nothing new about this practice. This method of life-saving has been used for many years. But within the past quarter of a century it has been greatly simplified and made safer. Thousands of lives are saved by this means.

When it is successful in results, it builds up the resistance and strength of the patient. It is an aid in battling infections and certain diseases. It is indispensable in the treatment of severe hemorrhage following infection or accident.

In former years a transfusion was regarded almost as a major operation. It was associated with danger. But this is all past. In spite of present day safety, there are still many persons who dread the idea. One reason is the fear of receiving inferior contaminated blood. Such a possibility is remote because adequate precautions are taken to guard against this danger.

A relative may volunteer to give the blood, but in many cases the blood is obtained from professional donors. These persons are under constant supervision, reporting for periodic check ups on health. Only certain forms or types of blood are used. Since there are four different groups it is necessary to find exactly the right type to "match" the blood of the patient. This is quickly and accurately determined by certain tests.

No one should deprive himself of this life-saving and health-building procedure. It is amazing to see the immediate and beneficial results of the transfusion.

Prior to the transfusion the patient appears pale, restless and weak. The skin is almost yellowish in color and the lips are colorless.

Almost immediately after the injection of blood there is a marked change in the appearance. The lips assume a reddish color and the cheeks no longer are pale and anemic looking.

"Love I Dare Not" by ALLENE CORLISS

CHAPTER XXIII

Gina said, "I wish you both all sorts of luck, darling. I know you do." Alec leaned forward and rumbled her short curling hair lightly. It was an old habit and an endearing one. He had always liked to touch her hair. Once it had given him exquisite delight. Now she knew it was merely an affectionate and quite unconsidered gesture. It meant little or nothing to Alec but it was the sort of thing that made being alone with him for any length of time dangerous to this newly acquired invulnerability for which she had worked so hard.

She said, "You really have to run along, Alec. I'm dining with Barry and I don't want to go. I want to talk with you."

"But you've already told me everything you've said and everything Sam said."

"Not about the play. About you. Are you going to Paris in June?"

"I don't know. I haven't given Barry a definite answer yet."

"But that night she gave him one. At night, dining with him at one of the smarter dinner spots where he was taking her very regularly in the spring, she told him she would."

She said, "You're right, Barry. I'll be better off in Paris than I am in New York. For the moment, New York seems to be very bad for me."

Neither of them mentioned why it was bad for her. Neither of them mentioned Alec. But Barry thought, "She wants to get away before this business between Alec and Caroline comes to a head. . . she doesn't want to be here . . ."

And she might not have been, if an unforeseen heat wave had not sent everyone scurrying out of town and closed Caroline's play two weeks early, so that for the first time in months Caroline found herself with money on her hands and more money than she knew what to do with.

Money to buy clothes and a small car and rent a cottage at the shore. Time to play, to go to the theater, to dance, to swim, to lie for hours in the sun. Time, at last, to stop for a little and think about herself and her life and Alec.

She no longer, in this spring of 1938, thought about Tommy Gale at all.

The cottage at the shore was Alec's idea.

He said, "I know the exact place for you. It's in Connecticut, there's a delightful flower garden, a nice little private beach and an efficient couple that goes with the house. If you are too busy to leave town, I'll go close to go along with you."

When Alec and Caroline drove out the next morning to look the place over and sign the lease, she was enthusiastic but apprehensive.

"It looks like such an establishment," she said. "Two servants and a whole house. . . it's so nice."

She had not yet grown used to the fact that she was potentially a money maker. Alec said to her now, "You are already making two hundred dollars a week. You will make much less this summer, but by fall you will be making twice that again. There is no reason, really, why you should not have this place if you like it."

Like it, but I will have only two months here and then I have to go to Baltimore."

Alec said, "I've thought of that and I've arranged to sublet it for you for the rest of the summer."

So Caroline signed the lease and three days later moved out. Gina, getting ready to spend a summer in Europe, was too busy to leave town. Or at least she said she was, and Caroline never for a moment suspected that she might have other reasons for not wanting to go. So in the end, it was Rose Martell who went along. Her dyed hair and absurd summer furs and trailing lace dinner dresses looked incongruous and ridiculous in the charming, small Connecticut house with its subdued chintzes and early American pine, but Caroline was used to her, fond of her, and preferred to have her rather than anyone else she knew.

After the first week, which was hectic with many trips into town after country clothes and additional silver, linen and china for the house, the days fell into a sort of pleasant routine.

Caroline slept late, had a short swim before breakfast and a long one before lunch. Afternoons she read, sun-bathed, occasionally drove into town to a matinee that she had missed during the winter because she was working herself. Evenings she invariably spent with Alec.

Sometimes in town. More often in the country, where they danced to the radio, talked shop or later in the month, drove about to houses in the neighborhood where people they both knew, but more particularly Alec, were gradually moving out for the summer.

Sometimes sitting on a terrace or in a long, candlelit living-room, its windows flung open to the night and the water, Caroline thought that she had come a long way from the girl who had left Portland, Maine, such a short time before. She knew and was accepted by these people—friends of Alec's mostly, although some of them she knew by now fairly well. Amusing, clever, hard-living, hard-working people for the most part, who were used to sudden successes.

Who seemed to find nothing surprising in the fact that last summer she had not been one of them and that this summer she was. She listened to them talk and watched them drink and drank a little herself. A very little because she did not like the taste of hard liquor and, besides, the only effect it had on her was to make her sleepy and dull. So for the most part she found herself looking on, and she discovered that among all these people there was no one quite so good-looking, or amusing, or charming as Alec.

Besides him the other men seemed unbelievably dull and uninteresting. Now that she had time to be with him and was not tired and driven by her work, she realized that it would be very easy to let herself go . . . to fall a little in love with him.

One night, looking at him across a roomful of people, she realized with a little shock that he had not made love to her for a long while. She thought, "Perhaps that was something that lasted just a little while last winter. . . perhaps he has forgotten that once he asked me if I could ever learn to love him. . . if, given time, I could some day marry him."

But Alec had not forgotten. He had merely been wise. He had waited, as he had told Gina he intended to, until such time as Caroline was free to put her mind on him. She was free now, had been for some weeks. He did not intend to wait much longer.

In the meantime, he read The Apple Orchard to her, told her his plans for her in connection with it. At first she was inarticulate with surprise. Then she was touched and fearful. Touched that he should believe in her enough to risk so much, apprehensive that she might fail him.

She asked, "But have I had enough experience and am I a good enough actress to carry this part, Alec?"

"You have not had enough experience, perhaps, but you are a good enough actress . . . and by fall you will have had more experience. It might be wiser to wait another year, but I am not wise where you are concerned, darling. . . because you see, I am so much in love with you . . ."

She was a little surprised to find that suddenly she was trembling. She stood up and Alec took her hand and together they started to walk toward the beach in the moonlight.

"It's been a long time since you have mentioned it, Alec," she said. "I've wondered sometimes recently if you still were . . ."

"Well," said Alec, and his fingers crushed hard against hers. "Now you know that I am. If I have been silent for so long, if I have not made any attempt even to kiss you, it has been because I was determined not to hurry you. Not to rush you into something you weren't sure about. I still don't want to hurry you, darling, but I think that I have to kiss you . . . at least once . . ."

He kissed her with the moonlight sliding over them. It was then, with Alec's arms around her, with his lips possessing her, that she thought of Tommy Gale.

Tommy had said, "You're all set with Alec. He's mad about you and he's a swell guy and worth two of me any day."

He had been snowing her. There had been snow on his shoulders and the brim of his hat. And later they had kissed with the snow drifting soft against both their faces. . . and then he had said, "There is something about a girl and a snow-storm . . . forgive it, please . . ."

And presently he had left her and the few times they had met since then he had been careful to let her see how casual it had all been and how quickly forgotten.

She thought, "I shall think of him now, just this once, and I shall never think of him again. All the rest of my life I shall think of Alec."

Alec stopped kissing her and held her a little away from him so he could see her face clearly in the moonlight. "Oh, my dearest, you do love me a little, don't you?"

And Caroline said, trying desperately to put Tommy Gale and that drifting snowstorm and all the sweet, mad ecstasy of that foolish kiss out of her heart, "Yes, Alec, I do. I even love you enough to marry you if that is what you will want."

Long afterward, when she found that she was wrong about this, that she didn't love him enough for that, it was consoling to her to know that at least in that moment of saying it she believed that she did. That in that moment she sincerely believed that she was being utterly honest with him and with herself.

Falling Wall Traps Five Firemen

One of the five firemen injured by a falling wall during a blaze which destroyed a coopeage plant in Brooklyn, N. All five of the fire fighters were seriously hurt, but the blaze was confined to the plant.

U.S.-Alaska Highway Plan Up To Canada; Views Divided

By EDWIN E. DOWELL, United Press Correspondent

VANCOUVER, B. C.—Considered an invaluable military lifeline by the United States, but recognized only as a "highway of romance" by Canada, the proposed international roadway to Alaska today is just $15,000,000 from completion.

With both governments admitting the tremendous military value of such a great north-south motor highway as a connecting link of the Pacific coast, the Dominion would rather consider the project nothing more than a passageway into the interior of British Columbia—abundant in natural resources.

Feeling in British Columbia, through which province more than 1,000 miles of the roadway would pass, was that participation in the Pacific coast program would eventually involve Canada in event of a United States-Japanese conflict.

Money Big Problem

Financing of the vast international artery linking Seattle, Wash., with Fairbanks, Alaska, today remains the sole outstanding obstacle to realization.

Dominion government spokesmen, never outwardly opposed to the program, have voiced little opposition to an American-financed artery through Canadian territory beyond stating that British Columbia, with an annual revenue of only $30,000,000, is in no position to finance its stretch of the proposed 1,200-mile route to Alaska.

Recent conversations between Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia and Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes indicate negotiations for construction to be fairly well advanced. Pattullo remained reticent about progress of his discussions, while Ickes spoke favorably for the highway.

Launched as early as 1930 in British Columbia, the proposal at first gained both Conservative and Liberal support. Conservative backing fell away later, however, until today it stands as one of the strongest opponents of the roadway.

Attacked as "Extravagance"

Herbert Anscomb, Victoria Conservative, attacked Premier Pattullo's government for extravagance in considering "such a wild scheme."

"Such a far-fetched plot is entirely out of the realm of politics," Anscomb said. "The idea is nothing but a far-sighted military move by the U. S."

R. L. Maitland, King's Council, accused the Pattullo administration of autocracy, and said the scheme was just another "dream of Pattullo's."

Liberals, however, always behind the project, have been quick to rally to Pattullo's support.

Liberal speakers have kept the program alive in British Columbia. Public service clubs and other interests seeking to benefit by the tourist trade such a roadway would bring have supported the plan.

William Asselstine, provincial minister of mines and trade and industry, is a staunch advocate of the Alaska highway. Asselstine maintains more transportation facilities are required to open immense northern mining areas in the interior of the province.

PASADENA, Cal.—Rains which caused the Los Angeles floods washed down so much silt from the mountains that it got the better of the curiosity of H. J. Bernard, veteran gold prospector. He began panning for gold in the silt along Colorado street. Now he is exhibiting flasks of gold that he panned within the city limits.

sufficient for the resort. A beach costume today includes sandals, cape, slacks, bonnet, bag for accessories, sun glasses and various other accoutrements. Farm Pests Survive Mild Winter In Many U. S. Localities

By FRED BAILEY United Press Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 20.—A large number of insects which survived the warm winter have begun to inflict heavy damage upon early crops, reports to the Department of Agriculture indicate.

"The vanguard of the 1938 army of insect pests, advancing with warm weather, have brought widespread destruction to vegetation and a threat of more to come," an Insect Pest Survey bulletin said.

Despite millions of dollars spent every year in fighting plant pests they cause damage estimated at $500,000,000. Grasshoppers, Mormon crickets, chinch bugs and bollworms cause a major portion of the damage.

Mississippi Delta Invaded

Armyworms and cutworms made an early appearance in the lower Mississippi valley, injuring several crops, notably oats and alfalfa. Cutworms also have been especially destructive in the Delta.

Winter survival of the corn ear worm was greater than last year in New Jersey, Virginia, Ohio and Texas. For the first time on record this worm lived through the winter in Kansas and Utah.

"Why" Sermon Topic Of Rev. M. Searles

Rev. M. Searles of the Light-house Tabernacle has chosen to speak Sunday morning at 10:45 on the word "Why," taking as his text St. Matthew 27:46.

About the subject Rev. Searles states: "Many times during each one of our lives we may meet with experiences that puzzle us to understand. The little word that as children we so often directed back at mother is so often sent up to God. Some dare to question the wisdom of God and demand an answer for the reason of His doing with us His creatures."

"It is well to let the Bible explain these many mysteries to us. The Psalmist found the Word of God a lamp unto his feet and a light unto his pathway. It still is the bright beacon or the mighty X-ray that throws a beautiful light into the dark experiences of life."

"This message will turn the mighty Word of God on many of the puzzling things of human experience, and show us God's reason why."

Your Great Need

Since everything else has failed, why not try God? There can be no other way of rectifying the vicious mixed up affairs of the world without God's help. You need Him to clarify your visions, to balance your judgment to purify your ideals, to forgive your sins, and to give you hope of a blessed eternity. You need God. Your life is futile and aimless without Him. You need Him in joy and in sorrow, in life and in death. You need more than anything else in the world the redemption of your soul by the crucified Saviour. Wake up to your needs. Stop treating divine verities lightly. Stop taking chances with your soul. Stop trifling with eternity. The Church has the Word of God, the answer to the anxious questions of your heart. The needs of your soul are not satisfied unless you are in right relationship to God.

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "And the Lord said unto Moses, Hew thee two tables of stone like unto the first; and I will write upon these tables the words that were in the first tables, which thou brakest. And be ready in the morning, and come up in the morning unto mount Sinai, and present thyself there to Me in the top of the mount." (Exodus 34:1-2.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Identity is the reflection of Spirit, the reflection in multifarious forms of the living Principle, Love. Soul is the substance, Life, and intelligence of man, which is individualized, but not in matter. Soul can never reflect anything inferior to Spirit."

OLD TIMERS IN TIE FOR ROUND CHAMPIONSHIP

Vets Defeat Ohio Edison To Tie For First Round Title In Class A League

Old Timers To Engage Salem Chinas Monday In Play-Off for Round Championship; Presbyterians Topple From First In Class B

Defeating the Ohio Edison, 7 to 3, at Centennial park Friday evening, the Old Timers pulled into a tie with the Salem Chinas for the first round championship of the Class A Softball league. Both teams have won five games and lost one.

Joe Kelley, director of the league, announced today that the play-off game to determine the winner of the first round title will be staged at the park Monday evening. The round champion qualifies for the city championship series at the close of the season.

With Patsy Konnerth, George Earley and Pete Sanders leading the hitting, the Old Timers scored twice in the first inning and five times in the second frame to practically sew up their fifth victory before the Ohio Edison could get started.

The O. E. nine came back with two runs in the third inning and one more in the fifth but they were too far behind to have these markers make any impression on the Old Timers' lead. It was the second defeat in five games for the Edisonites.

Earley went the full five innings on the mound for the Old Timers and gave up seven hits. Ward pitched for the Ohio Edison, allowing nine hits. Errorless ball aided the veterans in setting down the O. E. team.

Rallying in the fourth and fifth innings, Demings nosed out the Trades Class, 3 to 1, in the other Class A tilt last evening. The Pumpmakers tallied one run in the fourth frame and one in the fifth to top the victory after the Trades Class had held the lead from first inning on the strength of one run.

McQuiston, pitching for the Pumpmakers, held the Trades Class to two hits in his best twirling job of the first round. Kasso and Miller alternated on the mound for the Trades Class and together allowed eight hits.

The Friday games completed the Class A loop's first round schedule, except for the championship play-off. The second round will probably get under way next Tuesday. The new schedule will be announced Monday.

The Presbyterians toppled from their first place berth in one of two Class B games last evening, losing to the Columbians, 6 to 5. The victory boosted the Columbians into the lead with a record of four wins and one defeat. It was the Presbyterians' second loss of the round.

The defending champions Emmanuel Lutherans trounced the Christians, 7 to 3, in the other Class B contest with Palk and Mike Linder pacing the hitting for the Emmanuelites.

MCKINLEY TOPS LEAGUE RIVALS

Defeats Fourth Street School In McGuire League Game

Held to one hit, Fourth Street school mushballers lost out to McKinley, 12 to 5, in a Mickey McGuire Softball league game Friday. Greene pitched for the McKinley nine and, although he granted several walks, his hurling was good enough to keep Fourth Street from connecting for more than one safe blow. Walter Brian led McKinley in batting with two hits out of two trips to the plate.

MICHIGAN ACE STAR OF MEET

Bill Watson Leads Qualifiers In Big Ten Track Events

BY FRITZ HOWELL
COLUMBUS, May 21.—The Wolverines of the University of Michigan headed today toward their second straight Western conference track and field championship and their 16th since the turn of the century.

Paced by William Watson, junior star from Saginaw, Michigan placed 13 men in 10 qualifying events staged Friday, five more than any other school was able to get into the select list.

Watson set a new Big Ten record in the shot put with a toss of 52 feet, 11 1/2 inches, beating his own mark of 50 feet, 10 1/2 inches set in 1937; paced the discus throwers with a heave of 152 feet, 4 1/2 inches, and topped the broad jumpers with a 24 foot, 11 1/2 inch effort. Watson, defending champion in those events, appeared headed for another "grand slam" in today's finals.

Eight men each were qualified by Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa and Indiana. Ohio State placed seven, Chicago and Purdue five each, Minnesota three and Northwestern one.

Only one event was without a Michigan entrant — the 220-yard dash in which Robert Lewis, Ohio State's junior star, won his heat in 21.7, the same mark with which Fred Teufel of Iowa won the second heat.

A duel in the dashes appeared likely after Lewis broke the 100-yard tape in 9.6 and Teufel was clocked in 9.9. Wisconsin's crack runner, Charles Fenske, was favored to capture the mile. He qualified for the half-mile without exertion in 1:53.3, one and one-tenth seconds above the Big-Ten record.

Glenn Cunningham, famed Kansas miler, will attempt to put a "four-minute mile" record into the books with an exhibition run. Entriklin, 1b State half-mile champion, and Brian, 2b several Buckeye freshmen were to pace him.

Grate Recreation Alleys Will Close

With organized bowling activity for the 1937-38 season finished, the Grate Recreation alleys will close tonight. E. L. Grate, owner, announced today.

The alleys will be resurfaced and refinished during the summer, preparatory to the opening of the 1938-39 season next September. Ralph Gregg, manager, will be in charge of work on the alleys.

McKechnie Magic Making Cincinnati Reds Leading Threat For Top Division

Johnny Vander Meer Is Prize Product To Date Although Team Was Fortunate In Picking Up McCormick, Hershberger and Craft

By SID FEDER.

Prof. William McKechnie's magic marvels, the show that wowed 'em in Boston last year, is giving the boys and girls in Cincinnati a lot of entertainment this season, and spreading no end of anxious moments among the seven other clubs in the National league.

Professor Will is about as slick an article as the baseball business has seen since John McGraw. He can pull more rabbits out of fewer and littler hats than the best magicians of vaudeville's heyday.

Take last year, for instance. He had a collection of hitless wonders at Boston—a bunch of bees without stingers—and he had a couple of rookie pitchers who were doddering old men of 31. So Professor Will and his magic brought that outfit in only one game out of first division. At the same time, Cincinnati's Reds were collapsing all over the place, and wound up a dismal last, 40 games back of the championship Giants.

Over the winter, Cincinnati, having disposed of Chuck Dressen, lured McKechnie over to see what he could do about the Reds. And Professor Will is showing them again in the best way possible—the official standings, which have his lads in fourth place right now and make them look like a pretty good threat for any loose first-division berths.

He was fortunate in the importation of three rookies (Buck McCormick, Will Hershberger and Harry Craft) and one comebacker (Dussey Cooke) to pack his lineup with punch. But, as always, it's with the pitchers that Willy Will is trotting out his magic. He has Paul Derringer, most notorious "bust" of recent years, back up there again, with five complete games in seven starts and a record of five wins and two setbacks. And he's done somewhat the same with Peaches Davis and Al Hollingsworth.

But his prize product to date has been Johnny Vander Meer. Johnny, up for a trial last year, was so wild the catchers demanded peach baskets and fishing nets to receive his stuff. Recalled this spring, he was given the official McKechnie double-o and promptly ordered to alter his delivery from a side-arm motion to an overhand. It worked wonders. He's walked only 17 men in 41 innings and now is one of the regular starters.

The McKechnie influence in his particular case stood out all over the place yesterday as Johnny blanked the slipping Giants, 4-0, with a five-hit job of elbowing. Only one of Bill Terry's Terriers got as far as third base against him as he handed the champions their second straight shutout defeat and made it three wins in four starts for the Reds against the league leaders. The win boosted the Reds into the .500 class, with 14 victories in 28 games.

For the Giants, the setback cut their league lead to 3 1/2 games over the second-place Cubs, who almost tore down the fences in the Philadelphia "telephone booth" ball park with 22-hit attack for a 16-7 victory.

In the only other National league game, the Dodgers topped the Pirates, 7-5, although Van Mungo was belted out of the box.

Cleveland's Indians maintained their slim first-place margin in the American league by trouncing Washington's slumping Senators, 6-3. The second-place Boston Red Sox stayed in the thick of the fight by beating St. Louis pitching for 22 hits and a 16-2 decision over the Browns. Lefty Grove won his seventh straight.

Schoolboy Rowe lasted seven innings, just long enough to be charged with the defeat as the Athletics trounced the Tigers, 5-2. The Yankees-White Sox and the Cardinals-Bees games were rained out.

MARTIN AHEAD IN OREGON RACE

Agricultural Element Challenges Labor Strength

The bitter race had no direct White House influence. President Roosevelt repeated his hands-off statement yesterday and James A. Farley, chairman of the Democratic party, took no action.

Charles A. Sprague, Salem editor, pulled swiftly away from seven rivals in the Republican gubernatorial contest. The count in 1102 precincts gave him 38,643 and Sam Brown, his closest opponent, 15,922.

Mahoney Leading
Willis E. Mahoney led U. S. Attorney Carl Donough, 39,587 to 29,785 in returns from 1922 precincts in the Democratic nomination for the regular term in the United States senate. Rufus Holman, state treasurer, topped Robert Stanfield, former senator, 64,165 to 21,196 in the Republican lists.

Alex Barry of Portland had a sharp lead in the Republican voting for the short term in the United States senate over Rende M. Ireland and T. McNary Wood. Robert Miller of Portland had no opposition on the Democratic ticket. Oregon's non-campaigning congressional delegation seemed assured of renomination.

WRITERS FLEE FROM AUSTRIA

Forseeing Nazi Triumph, Authors Flock To Paris Haven

By HUGO SPECK
United Press Correspondent

PARIS, France—Fear of an eventual Nazi march through central Europe, depressing economic conditions in that part of the world and the seizure of Austria has caused 12 of the best Austrian and Hungarian play and scenario writers to desert their own countries and establish themselves in Paris.

Here under the guiding hand of Georges Marton, who for the last 10 years has been recognized as the most important literary advisor and agent in central Europe, the authors have abandoned their own countries only because of the force of circumstances to form what is probably the greatest existing writing unit outside of Hollywood or New York. They are:

Gina Kaus, authoress of the current French film success, "Prison sans Barreaux", and several best seller novels like "The Sisters Klee" and "Katherine Empress."
Ladislav Fodor, second only to the Hungarian playwright Franz Molnar, Fodor wrote "Girl's Dormitory," "Youth at the Helm," "Good Morning, Bill," and "The Unguarded Hour."

Hans Jary, foremost young Austrian author and actor. His play, "Ping Pong," is to open shortly in London.

Freud's Nephew Included
Guido Freud, nephew of Dr. Sigmund Freud, the psychoanalyst, who has had several plays produced in Austria.

Stefan Bekeffi and Adorjan Stelle, well known Hungarian writing team, whose great continental success, "Unexcused Absence," is to be produced in London shortly, adapted by Ian Hay.

Otto and Edgar Eis, successful scenario writers, who just sold a play, "Nine Officers", which Carl Laemmle, Jr., will produce in Hollywood.

OSU Students Open Night Club of Own

COLUMBUS—Ohio State university students, either unwilling or unable to afford the cost of dining and dancing at Columbus night spots, have opened their own center of entertainment, the Mirror Lake Night club.

The campus club has several features to set it apart from professional competition.

No. 1 Difference: No matter what the request for refreshments the answer is always, "fruit flavored punch and pop."

No. 2: Curfew rings at 11:30 p. m. Finally, and the chief reason for existence: Price of admission is 25 cents per couple.

For that price, the thrifty escort can bring his best girl, dance play bridge or ping pong, or just sit in the moonlight by the edge of the small campus lake.

The club, sponsored by the residents of a dormitory and the Women's Recreation association, is open every Friday night.

VISALIA, Cal.—Chief of Police Harold Hicks proved himself a super G-man when a frightened citizen rushed in with a postal card demanding $450 "or else." After an intensive study of the card, he asked the man if by any chance he had a young son who read detective stories. He had.
